

Queer Youth Network (QYN pronounced "Queen") creates spaces for people that work within queer youth communities such as youth leaders, social service providers, artists, activists, community organizers and others that center their work on queer young people within the Seattle Metro area, King County, and surrounding counties. We come together to snack, skill shares, get to know each other, share updates, and put a face to the programs that are shifting our communities. Meetings are facilitated strategy sessions to create a vision around forwarding our collective work and building stronger alliances to create that vision.

QYN will be facilitating a visionary session on JUNE 13, 2014 (Friday) at "2014 LGBTQ ACCESS SUMMIT" in Seattle's Georgetown neighborhood.

During this session, participants will map the present landscape of where LGBTQ individuals, community programs and social services currently operate. As the workshop unfolds, we will move to a visionary strategy using the "Emergent Strategies" methodology created by adrienne marie brown. Facilitators will support participants dreaming past the daily obstacles of tomorrow, so we can move from the vision we would all like to exist in. The collective vision will be brought to future QYN gatherings to move the vision forward, as well as the 2014 Allied Media Conference (AMC).
